TRAINING

- 1) Be very patient with your pet .Your pet only wants to please you and will work very hard to learn how to use the new fountain.
- 2) When first training your pet to use the fountain, it will be easier to learn if you can have your pet approach the fountain from the front. One way to do this is to have something on the two sides as well as something on the backside so that your pet can only approach from the front .Once he is fully trained, you can remove the obstacles.
- 3) To get your pet to want to use his new fountain, you will want your pet to be very thirsty. Try running his around the house a few times or have your pet fetch the ball or stick for a few minutes until he becomes thirsty.
- 4) Have your pet approach the fountain. Push the paddle down with your hand or foot and let your pet start drinking from the fountain. Release the paddle, When your pet tries to drink from the fountain, put his front paw or paws on the paddle. Don't let him drink too much at first. Pull him off and then put him back on the paddle. Do this several times or until your pet is finished drinking.
- 5) You will want to wean your pet from the old watering bowl very quickly. Water our pet with the fountain as much as possible even if your have to be the one holding the paddle. It may take several days of training. Your pet will be very thirsty first thing in the morning, especially if he hasn't had access to water through the night. This tends to be a good time to train.
